Help your child develop a love for reading with these tips!

• Reading can be done throughout the day.
Leave books in the car or take them outside on a nice day.
Read cereal boxes, menus, recipes, and road signs together. It's all good reading practice—and it shows children that words are everywhere!

- Spend time with all kinds of books.

 Beloved books that you have read many times together, books that are easy for your child to read independently, books that are just right to read for now, and books that are "someday" books are all types that should be available for your child.
- Choose aspirational reading challenges.
 Nervous about them biting off more than they can chew? Don't be—children can often get enough information from the images alone to make for an interesting and satisfying read.
- Make reading a fun activity! Go to bookstores and take time to browse the shelves together. Get your child a library card at your local branch and get to know your librarians.
- Make reading possible by having books readily available. Have interesting books in your house, car, office, and any place you and your child spend time together.
- Use words as often as you can with your child. Sing songs together, make up funny rhymes, play board games, and dress up and pretend to be someone else. All of these activities help children learn about language and become confident language users.

• Read consistently and frequently.

Reading is like any other lifelong practice: you don't have to maintain a particular level of intensity—you just have to do it often enough to develop the habit.

- Talk often with your child about books. Make sure your child knows that you read for fun and for information. Model this behavior consistently and often, and talk about what you're doing as you do it.
- Encourage your child to express opinions.

Using language and reasoning to support their beliefs will help your young reader learn why they like or dislike something. Knowing why helps make them better understand their decisions.

• Lead by example and get caught reading. Let your child enjoy listening to you read, reading along with you, echoing what you just read, or alternating reading words, lines, or pages with you.

Parents and Educators

HarperCollins Children's Books publishes I Can Read! books to encourage children to want to read.

Each I Can Read! book focuses attention on language, simple sentence structure, engaging stories told through action and dialogue, and words that children can sound out and read themselves.

The direct correlation between the illustrations and the text provides clues that help young readers make sense of the story even when faced with new and challenging words. Better yet, children continue reading great stories about their favorite characters.

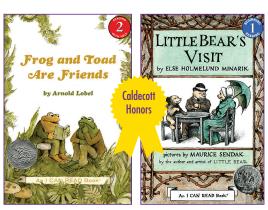

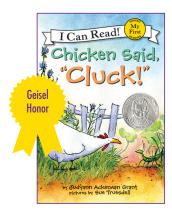

Awards have been given to many I Can Read! titles, including:

Frog and Toad author Arnold Lobel is the only person ever to win both the Caldecott Honor and Newbery Honor for easy-to-read books.
